

A wife's commitment to marriage and family

I believe God has made me as a woman to be in covenant with my husband. Marriage comes from God by _____ design and He has joined me to my Husband. _____

I will commit, by the power of the Holy spirit at work in my life, to live up to His call of marriage as a woman and _____ be the respectful helper the Lord commands me to be. _____

I will take my primary role as helper by being a powerful influence to my husband, encouraging and helping him _____ fulfill his call. _____

I will commit to living out the Gospel in my marriage by bearing with and forgiving my husband when he has _____ offended, even as Christ has done for me. _____

I will make developing my relationship with God my utmost priority. I will prioritize relationship with my husband above all worldly relationships, then my relationship with my children. I will not let my children or friends take _____ priority over him. _____

I will commit my whole heart to be submissive to my husband as the church is to Christ. I will work through the _____ struggle to learn how to do this. I will be respectful and honoring while doing this. _____

I seek to live out submission with a quiet and gentle spirit. I will work on letting the Holy Spirit help my husband _____ lead our family. _____

I will dedicate my whole heart to never let division and separation cause us to split apart. I will not entertain the thought of divorce with my husband but will always seek healing and restoration through Christ. _____

I recognize that I have a real enemy that will not want me to do these things. He will do everything to mar or destroy my marriage. I will resist him in the strength of God, covered in the armor He has provided for me. _____

I will not let the enemy win.
